- A letterhead is as important as a brand in that it represents a company and can make a first impression on potential customers.
- As a result, a letterhead must appear professional, or else people may assume the company is incompetent and untrustworthy.

Letterhead Design/Format:

- There are no restrictions on text format, font, or size; the only requirement is that the text be legible.
- Typically, companies will prominently display their business/trading name as well as contact information at the top of the Letterhead.

FAQs

Why do businesses require letterhead?

- Companies use letterheads to communicate important information to private individuals, other businesses, and legal entities without the need for a phone call or email.
- A professional letterhead is also a highly effective marketing tool when used correctly.

Is it illegal to copy a letterhead?

In India, these people have access to JAIL. If the employee has accepted the mistake with the employer and the employer has not filed a case, the employer may blacklist the employee in its internal records and/or post negative comments in BGV without filing a case.

Is letterhead legally binding?

- An agreement on plain paper has the same legal character and force as one written on the company's letterhead.

What is the distinction between a logo and a letterhead?

- One must first create a logo, which is a picture or symbol that represents his company.
- Then must create letterhead, which is a document that includes the company logo and other information.
- A letterhead template can be used for all types of letters and documents.
